PARADE OF HOMES

PLAN TO ATTEND!

Be Sure to Register!

YOU MAY WIN THIS $16,500 PRIZE HOME

Yes! This new home may be yours! For it's to be given away to some lucky person in the Parade of Homes. Now, there's no obligation—all you have to do is register, and all of the adult members of your family are eligible to register. Think what a spectacular opportunity this is—an opportunity actually to win a $16,500 new and modern home. Make your plans now—don't miss the Parade of Homes!

PARADE OF HOMES . . .

San Angelo's Great Home Exposition—Largest In All West Texas!

Imagine getting to see 24 brand spanking new homes, each one entirely different, each one embodying the newest, most modern ideas in home construction! Think what a wonderful source of home ideas this will provide! THAT'S the Parade of Homes! This is a home exposition of interest to everybody, to every member of the family. Now, remember, it starts NEXT Sunday, June 13th, and runs through Sunday, June 20th—EIGHT big days. It's such a big show you will want to attend several times in order to see all the wonderful details of all the homes. Remember the dates, and—

How to get to the Parade of Homes

The Parade of Homes is located in College Hills directly west of the General Telephone Company's new office building. The best way to get there from most parts of San Angelo is to go past San Angelo College to Johnson Street, past David Cressett Elementary School. Turn to the right, and go west one block on either University Avenue or Princeton Avenue.

Parade of Homes—Sunday, June 13th, Thru Sunday, June 20th!

PARK FEE/ Builders fight off city proposal

San Angelo subdividers and home builders today successfully thwarted a City Commission proposal to charge a park development fee on new residential building permits.

Commissioners in June had, on the recommendation of the City Planning Department, directed City Planning Commission to draft an ordinance which would produce park development money or the dedication of park land.

Three weeks ago, with six city commissioners present, the ordinance drew no action when the vote to introduce was 3-3, and action was delayed again last week by the six commissioners present.

Today, the action attracted more than 20 land developers and home builders, and after lengthy discussion commissioners voted 4-3 to turn down the ordinance.

Voting against introduction were Commissioners Troy Tucker, Tom Parrett, C. J. Holtkamp and Cato Cedillo. Mayor Bob McClellan, and Commissioners Kenneth McNease and Don Griffis voted in the minority.

Homebuilders Association president Bill Wynne said he objected to "anything that adds to the cost (of new homes)," and complained that "We (home builders) are always the first target... we get taken advantage of."

"I don't owe anybody a park," Wynne said. "They (prosepctive home buyers) are looking for basic square footage and good value."

He assured commissioners that "We're going to put this (added permit cost) right into the cost of the house, and put a profit on it, and the real estate agent will get a share too."

Griffis, in a rapid-fire cross-examination of City Planner Steve Wilkinson on the number of parks needed in the future and the amount of money needed to build them, ascertained about one new park might be needed "about once every five or six years;" that land purchase costs would run "about $100,000" for a five-acre tract; development costs would run about $13,000 per acre and maintenance costs about $1,000 per acre per year.

Griffis proposed that instead of $250 per dwelling unit charge or $150 charge — both figures suggested earlier — the charge be $5 per building permit for all construction unrelated to home building and $25 for residential permits, which would bring in "about $11,000 a year."

His proposal was to build this revenue in a trust fund and later request matching federal funds.

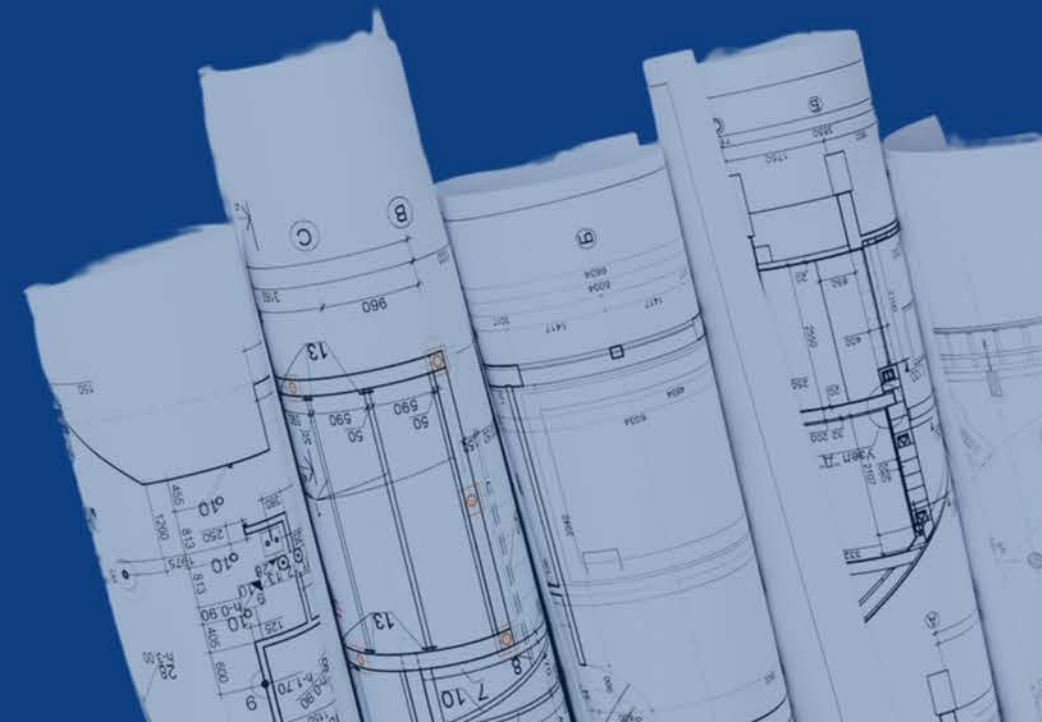

The mayor noted that park maintenance is a problem now, since the park budget is limited to $239,000 a year by city charter, and McNease repeated a suggestion he'd made at several previous meetings, that the city charter needs to be changed to allow more funds for the park department.

Southland Park developer James "Bubba" Duncan capped the discussion, saying that "everybody want a park, but nobody wants to pay. The home builders and apartment builders have asked me to say they think — we think — the proposal is discriminatory."

Griffis moved to introduce the ordinance with his figures, but the motion failed 4-3.

Industry faces challenges in providing homes for all

By GERALD D. JONES, President
Home Builders Association of San Angelo

For more than 50 years, the National Association of Home Builders has dedicated its efforts to building high-quality housing attainable at all income levels, enhancing the legislative and regulatory climate for housing and the building industry, expanding homeownership opportunities and promoting policies to maintain housing as a national priority.

Gerald D. Jones

And here in San Angelo the Home Builders Association of San Angelo, has worked with NAHB for 45 years to further these goals in our community.

Today, the housing industry faces many challenges.

Among them are bringing homeownership opportunities to the millions of Americans who are still unable to purchase a home, maintaining the availability of housing and assuring an adequate supply of decent, affordable rental units.

The housing industry also must promote innovation, develop new technology, foster competition and build a working partnership with all levels of government.

A healthy and competitive housing sector will create millions of good jobs and generate demand for billions of dollars worth of goods and services, thereby fueling the economy.

The benefits of new home construction go beyond fulfilling the basic human need for shelter and the creation of jobs throughout the economy.

Each year, builders sod or seed millions of acres of land, plant millions of trees, generate billions of dollars in additional tax revenue for public services and facilities and dedicate tens of thousands of acres of land to local jurisdiction for new parks, schools and libraries.

Home builders also construct or improve tens of thousands of miles of roads and construct billions of square feet of new retail, office and other commercial space to meet the demands of growing communities.

In addition, builders design and construct millions of dollars worth of storm water and other water quality management systems that prevent flooding and enhance the water quality of the entire community.

Mayor Dick Funk, City Manager Stephen Brown, Arthur Goetz, Building Inspection and Permit Administrator, and members of the Building Inspection and Permit Department all have played a key role recently to make housing more attainable in San Angelo.

By working together on the elements that make neighborhoods and communities a reality, home builders provide a good mix of housing opportunities and create a positive quality of life for all residents.

Why I Belong To My Builders Association

Occasionally someone asks me why I belong to the Builders Association.

I tell them I belong because I do not think that I know all that I should know about the building business.

I belong because I want to keep up with the fast-moving developments in our industry.

I belong because I want to attend meetings where I can learn things and exchange ideas with others.

I tell them I belong because I want to learn how to better merchandise the homes and apartments I build or the products and services I sell.

I belong because the public regards a member as an established and progressive firm.

I belong because the Association is on the firing line every day on a twenty-four hour basis, watching over the interest of the Building industry.

I believe, as Theodore Roosevelt said, "Every man owes a part of his time and money to the business or industry in which he is engaged. No man has a moral right to withhold his support from an organization that is striving to improve conditions within his sphere."
